Self Portraits: A Vogue Portfolio, an exhibition of self portrait paintings by leading women artists, will inaugurate Deitch Projects's new gallery space at 26 Wooster Street. This exhibition presents paintings created for a ten-page portfolio commissioned by Vogue for its December issue along with additional works.

The exhibition contains work by a number of today's most celebrated women artists. The fourteen artists featured in the show are: Vanessa Beecroft, Cecily Brown, Rachel Feinstein, Jacqueline Humphries, Sophie Matisse, Wangechi Mutu, Elizabeth Peyton, Susan Rothenberg, Dana Schutz, Amy Sillman, Kiki Smith, Charline von Heyl, Sue Williams, Su-en Wong, and Lisa Yuskavage. Most of the work was created especially for this project. Many of the artists had never previously made a self portrait; others had tried it only once or twice before. Each of these contemporary artists has approached a traditional art form in her own way, with innovative and surprising results.

The Vogue portfolio and accompanying exhibition are curated by Dodie Kazanjian, the editor at large who covers the art world for Vogue magazine. This commission is a continuation of Vogue's long commitment to the coverage of new art. The exhibition is of particular interest now because of the strong revival of figurative painting and the renewed interest in issues of self-identity.
